5 Educating a few; the potential to reach thousands
There are 18 international students currently enrolled in Concordia Seminary’s graduate programs. “With two-thirds to three-fourths of the students, I believe that each person could be a future teacher at a seminary somewhere else in the world,” Dr. Bruce Schuchard, dean of advanced studies, said.

The last issue of Concordia Seminary magazine (as with earlier issues) brought some interesting and touching responses from readers. The staff at the Seminary is always delighted to hear from those who receive the magazine, and we encourage you to keep writing us. While we may not always have space for mentioning readers’ comments, there are a few from the last issue that I would like to share.

The old brick oven on campus that was pictured in the winter 2011 issue brought back some wonderful memories for Carolyn Schifferdecker. She lived on the campus of the Seminary when she was a child. It was where her father worked as a maintenance man. She recalled regularly visiting the building where the oven was in full operation. “We would go there at the end of the day to meet my father and walk home with him. The smells from the bakery were always wonderful! I can still picture the baker standing at his oven, with a large white apron, putting in large trays of bread, rolls, cookies, cakes, pies, and coffee cakes. He was always smiling and laughing. When he saw us, he always had time to talk to us and give us a treat. So, when I saw the picture of the oven, it made my day! The students during those years truly received good home cooking and baking — a labor of love from the heart.”

The tribute to families with generations of pastors and church workers was a feature that caught the attention of quite a number of readers. Some recalled generations in their own families of pastors and other servants of the Lord. Some knew members of the youngest generations (who are now pastors or about to be pastors) when they were young infants.

“One hundred years old and still preaching” was the message shared with us by Pastor Mark Drengler, a 1991 graduate of the Seminary. He wanted us to know that his wife’s grandfather, Pastor Gerhardt Gerike, a Seminary alum from the 1930s, would be preaching in Lake Wales, Fla. on the occasion of his 100th birthday on May 1 of this year. A blessed happy birthday to you, Pastor Gerike!

The photo of Connor Pittman and his grandfather, President Dale A. Meyer, brought many comments. The great candid photo and President Meyer’s message captured for many the importance of passing on the faith…and the importance of the ongoing mission of Concordia Seminary to educate and shape pastors and others for future generations.

Past generations. We thank God for their commitment to ministry. Present generations. May they honor those who have gone before and praise God for the work that has been passed on to them. Future generations. May all who come after us be blessed with the joy and hope of the Gospel of Jesus Christ as we have been, and may there always be faithful pastors to lead them!

A highlight of my spring was the visit to campus of seventh and eighth graders from St. Paul’s Evangelical Lutheran Church in Chicago Heights, Ill. I was confirmed and graduated from St. Paul’s but our class picture looked different than the photo you see on this page. We all looked very much alike. The only one “different” in our class was Helmut who had come to us from Germany via Brazil. If we thought we had a “minority,” I guess Helmut was it. But as you can see, St. Paul’s students look a lot different 50 years later.

“It is estimated that by 2050 one of every four Americans will be Hispanic while the white Anglo population of America will be below 50 percent. Hispanic, African American, African immigrant, and Asian congregations must be part of a growing 21st century Missouri Synod, not some backwater colonies of our predominant but rapidly aging white Anglo church. We’ll have to get comfortable with churches and fellow baptized who speak Spanish, Sudanese, Mandarin, and whatever languages first generation immigrants are speaking.” (Concordia Journal, Winter 2011)

Two summers ago the faculties of both LCMS seminaries met together. British scholar Philip Jenkins shared statistics and insights about how the face of Christianity is changing. He predicted that by the year 2050 America will still be predominantly Christian but “it will not be made up of the old stock.” The face of American Christianity will be many colors, many languages, some native born and many immigrants. The faces of St. Paul’s students bear that out.

The programs and students of Concordia Seminary reflect this new time in American Christianity. Through our Ethnic Immigrant Institute of Theology, our Center for Hispanic Studies, and the Cross-Cultural Ministry Center at Concordia University in Irvine, Calif. and through our more traditional programs, Concordia Seminary is preparing pastors and deaconesses for 21st century service and mission.

The St. Paul’s tour ended with a visit to my office. I showed them two of the very dearest books in my large personal library. The first was the Bible given to me by Uncle Bob and Aunt Joan at my confirmation, March 26, 1961. They inscribed on the first page, Be faithful unto death. The second was a little devotional book given to each confirmand by our pastor, Rev. Arthur A. Brauer. I read a paragraph from the book to the students. I am giving you this little book. Its title sums up everything I can say to you now. Remember! Remember your God, your Savior, your church! Never forget! Every time you open this book, I hope you will remember all the eternally important matters we considered while you were preparing for your great day of confirmation. And I hope too, that you will always remember that I, your pastor, who lived a while on earth with you, want to spend eternity with you. That’s why with your help Concordia Seminary is striving to provide pastors and workers for the faces of the future.
Not long ago, Dr. Bruce Schuchard, dean of advanced studies, reviewed the list of 18 international students currently enrolled in Concordia Seminary’s graduate programs and considered how each might serve in the future.

“With two-thirds to three-fourths of the names, the consistent answer was that each person would be a future teacher at a seminary somewhere else in the world,” Schuchard relates. “To recognize that one person returning to one seminary will train hundreds or more future pastors who then will go out to proclaim Christ to hundreds and thousands of others — to see that kind of potential in one student after another really gets a person excited.”

Educating a few; the potential to reach thousands

Alexandre Vieira

Theological study is very much a part of Alexandre Vieira’s life these days. He finished a Master of Arts program at Concordia Seminary in January and has returned to his native Brazil where he is completing the M.Div. program at Seminário Concordia in São Leopoldo.

In Brazil, Vieira explains, the M.Div. program takes six years. In 2009 he left for a two-year exchange program in the United States and chose to study for the M.A. degree at Concordia Seminary. He intends to return to the Seminary in St. Louis to study for a Master of Sacred Theology (S.T.M.) in exegetical theology, specializing in the New Testament. His goal is to complete his studies by 2014.

Concordia Seminary is always considered a first option among Brazilian Lutheran theology students, according to Vieira. “Due to the good relationship between the LCMS and the Evangelical Lutheran Church in Brazil (IELB), a lot of pastors and professors have studied at Concordia Seminary over the years,” he says.

Vieira, 25, was born and raised in Porto Alegre. His family was nominally Roman Catholic, and he recalls being seven years old when his uncle’s family — Lutherans — began inviting them to church on special days like Easter, Christmas, and Mother’s Day. As relationships grew with other members and the pastor, the family became Lutherans. Vieira and his wife, Celiane, have been married five years.

“No matter where I’ll serve in the future, this program will certainly provide me with important tools for any kind of ministry, especially teaching in one of our Lutheran universities or seminaries,” he says.

Many also go on to serve in other important leadership roles in their home church bodies. Schuchard cites the example of Rev. Amos Bolay, acting president of the Evangelical Lutheran Church of Liberia.

International students who are attracted to Concordia Seminary are “almost always Lutheran” notes Dr. Reed Lessing, director of the graduate school. He serves as advisor to students pursuing the Master of Sacred Theology (S.T.M.) and Doctor of Philosophy (Ph.D.) degrees. During the 2010-11 academic year, the graduate school had a total enrollment of 92 students including the 18 international students.

“The predominant reason is that we are a confessional Lutheran Seminary and we have church partners all around the world who send their brightest and best to us,” Lessing says.

“Think about the ramifications when you train a man who is going to return to mainland China with evangelical Lutheran theology and teach the Bible,” he says. “Or think about our two students from India. God willing, they will train generations of pastors with the theology they learned here.”

The Seminary currently has a Baptist student from Myanmar (formerly Burma). A woman who recently earned a Ph.D. has returned to Thailand where she teaches and serves as an administrator at the Bangkok Institute of Theology.

Deaconess Ruth McDonnell serves as assistant director of the master of arts program. Her responsibilities include academic advising to the students pursuing M.A. degrees. She helps students stay on schedule with admission exams and policies and tracks their progress once on campus. She also writes grant requests and seeks contributions to special projects in the graduate school.

She notes that the international students also bring a dimension to the entire Seminary: “It’s fascinating to learn the cultural differences from our students — to see them interact theologically with other students in classes as they bring the flavor of life from places around the world. It’s seeing that worldwide picture and meeting the challenge to express the Gospel in ways that relate to cultures and people who aren’t like us.”

Jean-Baptiste Mberebe

Regardless of the continent, Christ’s church faces new challenges brought by secularized society, and Rev. Jean-Baptist Mberebe believes his Ph.D. study at Concordia Seminary will help strengthen his ministry as a Bible college teacher in Cameroon.

Mberebe began his Ph.D. studies last fall, hoping to complete his degree with a concentration in theology and culture by 2014. His home is Kaele, in the far north province of Cameroon, where he taught in the Bible College of the Church of the Lutheran Brethren. He expects to return and take up that teaching position.

“This study program will help me personally in my grasp of the message of the Gospel and the tools to bring it to the people,” he says. “Beyond that the Bible college that recommended me for this undertaking is hoping to transform into a full seminary so that it responds through the training of pastors to the challenges of globalization and secularization facing the Church today in Cameroon.”

Mberebe says he sensed from an early age the Lord “leading me to himself” through the Word. He was convinced of his calling to ministry of the Word as a teenager and, after confirmation, was recommended to pursue seminary training.

For Mberebe, his family remains in Kaele while he studies. At home are his wife, Helene Kaldjakwa, and four children. And during a summer break and return to Cameroon, he intends to meet a fifth child, who was born in May.
“To live in the Seminary community among Christians is something totally new for us,” says Rev. Guntars Baikovs. For one who is passionate about God’s Word, he believes the resources are almost limitless, including, “professors always ready to patiently answer your strange questions, the library, and fellow students who are burning to share their latest insights.”

Baikovs, a pastor whose home is in Valmiera, Latvia, began his studies here in 2008. He started with an S.T.M. focusing on Old Testament biblical theology and was recently accepted into the Ph.D. program in doctrinal studies. He has already begun writing theological materials for his church — five short volumes gathering the best from here and arranged around the outline of Luther’s Small Catechism.

Saying he wishes he could bring back a piece of the Seminary to Latvia, he says “The Beginning of Wisdom Series” is an attempt. The first volume is due to be finished this summer.

Now 39, Baikovs describes a faith journey with detours and roadblocks. The only son of non-Christian parents, he pursued a degree in psychology, spent time in the entertainment business, worked in information technology, co-founded small companies and studied management. The transformation came for him at one of Latvia’s strongest Lutheran congregations. “Somehow the Lord caused me to be hungry and thirsty to understand what this faith is all about,” he continues. He met almost every week with his pastor, a professor at the seminary in Latvia. Then he was invited to attend the seminary and now to continue his studies abroad.

Baikovs is married to Jana. A daughter, Agnese, 18, lives in Austria and daughter Anna, 19, is attending community college. Their younger children are Betija, 8, Davids, 7, and Daniels, 4.

While the history of the mission in India has been told from the vantage point of the LCMS and its missionaries, the story is yet to be told from the viewpoint of the Indian people. So that becomes the subject of research and a future Ph.D. dissertation for Stanish Stanley, whose study at Concordia Seminary focuses on historical theology.

“The India Evangelical Lutheran Church (IELC) was the first mission outreach of the LCMS, begun in 1895,” Stanley says. “It’s basically an IELC look into the theological contributions of the Indian people, how they perceived what the missionary was doing for them and how they perceived Jesus Christ as their savior and redeemer.”

Stanley cites several reasons for his decision to do his graduate work at Concordia Seminary: the 116-year relationship between the IELC and the LCMS; the fellowship between the partner churches; and the confessional Lutheran heritage that they share. “It was my church president, Rev. J. Samuel, who wanted me to come and study here more than anywhere,” he says. “When I got a scholarship to study here, I took the opportunity.”

Stanley began his study in 2008 and plans to finish in 2013. He earned a master’s degree from the Protestant Theological University in the Netherlands and a Bachelor of Divinity degree in Bangalore, India. While he has conducted a year of work as a candidate ready for ministry in India, he has not yet been ordained.

The son of a parish pastor, his plan is to serve a parish when he completes the graduate study. If opportunities arise, he will consider teaching or serving in administration. “I definitely want to give back what I have learned and make my contribution as a witness to the church,” he says.

Stanley’s family includes his wife, Beena, and daughters Catherine, 5, and Riona, 20 months.
What makes someone decide to further their education? For many, it’s the desire to gain skills in a field in which they’re already involved or interested. It typically involves a lot of personal sacrifice, especially if that person has a family and a full-time job. But what would make a married couple decide to further their educations at the same time, at the same institution, in the same program?

For Nelson and Perla Rodríguez, deciding to study at the Center for Hispanic Studies (CHS) through Concordia Seminary, St. Louis, was fairly simple, at least in terms of wanting to take this theological journey together. “Being a busy and already fully committed family, it was hard for us not to begin and finish this portion of our journey together,” they commented. Nelson and Perla have been working together for several years at Comunidad de Gracia (Community of Grace), a Hispanic urban church plant in Houston, Texas.

The Center for Hispanic Studies offers part-time theological education through a diversity of delivery systems, including short-term residential intensive courses in St. Louis, courses taught at Seminary extension sites in Houston and Tampa, and some online courses. The Rodríguez’s have taken most of their classes at Lutheran Inter-City Network Coalition (LINC) in Houston. Students at extension sites come to St. Louis for weeklong intensives once a year.

Learning in community at the grassroots level and across Hispanic cultures is a huge part of the vision of CHS, according to Director Leopoldo Sánchez. “Living in community is incredibly important to Hispanics living in the U.S., who value building relationships as part of their formation process,” he commented. “Therefore this educational program honors and fosters ‘walking together’ through creating a community in the classroom.”

Classes are conducted entirely in Spanish because CHS students have a desire to work in church settings where Spanish is a critical component of the mission. “Sometimes CHS graduates are the only qualified, educated people to deliver the Gospel in their native language,” continued Sánchez, “so it’s imperative that they become familiar with issues affecting Hispanic communities in the U.S., and know the Lutheran confessions in Spanish.”

CHS was the right choice for Nelson and Perla. Nelson is enrolled in the pastoral track program and Perla is enrolled in the deaconess track program. “The unique classes are designed to help us understand not just the Scripture but also the cultural challenges, and many other important aspects,” they said. Nelson went on to say, “Without the help, commitment, love, and care from CHS, I would have not obtained the experience, skills and knowledge that I need to deal with real church life situations.”

Nelson came from a Methodist background in his home country of Puerto Rico before he became a Lutheran. “Being now a member and studying in the Lutheran church, I appreciate the fact that this faith is Bible based and very historical and well built with the right resources and background to make anyone feel confident, since we as Lutherans give all the credit to God,” Nelson said. Perla, born and raised in Houston, Texas, to native Mexican parents, has been a lifelong Lutheran.

Nelson and Perla have three children: Homero Alfonso (14), Victoria Esperanza (6), and Nelson Abraham (2). They have been a very important part of Nelson’s and Perla’s educational journey. “Although they are all of little age, they have supported us from the beginning with their patience and prayers,” Perla commented.

“Homero has been patient and very understanding with the demand that came with seminary and the weight of the church,” Perla continued. “He is very patient and helps us alleviate a lot of the everyday pressure by simply staying out of trouble and supporting his parents in this ministry.” Homero is very involved with the youth activities at their home church of Comunidad de Gracia, like the food pantry, youth events, sport activities, and he leads devotional and Bible studies.

The youngest Rodriguez’s also share in this experience with their parents. “Victoria and Abraham have assisted us with every class here in Houston. Although just six and two years of age, they have woken up early along with us to go to each class we have had for the last three years. They have not complained not once.”

The Rodríguez’s received their first calls as pastor and deaconess at Call Day on May 4 at Concordia Seminary. In Houston, they will continue to serve at their home church.

Nelson and Perla truly understand the importance of being theologically-formed in today’s world in order to serve God and His people. “Beginning with all the pressures from life, the media, and many other influences, people do not know what to believe,” Nelson said. “We need solid, educated, humble, and dedicated leaders to help God’s people understand the truth. The Lutheran church offers that balanced foundation for today’s overwhelmed population to be secure on their faith.”

“As an ordained pastor and deaconess, we hope to bless our current congregation with the proper qualifications and knowledge that we have obtained. With this new set of skills that we have developed, we hope to make our congregation better and our programs more effective and efficient for the sake of the kingdom of Christ.”

The Center for Hispanic Studies

The Center for Hispanic Studies (CHS) offers Seminary level pastoral and deaconess formation in the Spanish language. Prior to entering the Seminary level, students complete Entrance or Congregational level preparatory courses in Spanish through various CHS regional coordinators, theological education partners, and pastors in the field nationwide. The best students from the first level apply for admission to the Seminary level, which leads to certification for pastoral or deaconess ministry.

The Seminary level is a three year program. Six courses are taken each year, for a total of 18 courses in three years. Each academic year, five courses are delivered through short-term residential intensives given on the St. Louis campus or at extension-satellite sites (currently, CHS has satellites in Houston and Tampa). Each academic year, one course is also taught online.

“It is truly an unprecedented opportunity and great privilege to provide theological leadership in the formation of Latino/a Lutherans for pastoral and deaconess ministries in an increasingly Hispanic U.S.,” commented Dr. Leopoldo Sánchez, CHS Director and The Werner R. H. Krause and Elizabeth Ringger Krause Endowed Chair for Hispanic Ministries at Concordia Seminary.

The curriculum takes serious consideration of how confessional Lutheran theology is applied in various U.S. Hispanic/Latino communities and is ideal for candidates whose goal is to serve as pastors or deaconesses in such ministry and mission contexts. As part of their requirements for pastoral or deaconess certification, CHS students must also serve a two-year concurrent vicarage or deaconess internship under the mentorship of local pastors.

In partnership with Concordia Seminary’s Graduate School, qualified CHS students can now also apply during their first year to the M.A., the first Spanish-language graduate program in theology offered in a Lutheran institution in the Americas. For more information on CHS, please contact Dr. Leopoldo Sánchez or Mr. Mark Kempff at chs@csl.edu.
A dedicated life: Robert Bergt’s journey with theology and music

Editor’s note: The following story was adapted from an interview of Dr. Robert Bergt by Dr. James Brauer, professor emeritus and former dean of the chapel at Concordia Seminary, St. Louis, on the occasion of Dr. Bergt’s 80th birthday in Jan. 2010.

Dr. Robert R. Bergt has dedicated his life to studying and living two noble professions: theology and music. He intertwined his passions into a conducting and teaching career that has taken him all over the globe: at Concordia Seminary, St. Louis, for 14 years; at Southern Illinois University Carbondale for 10; for four years at Valparaiso University, Valparaiso, Ind.; and almost 10 years at Musashino Academia Musicae in Tokyo, Japan.

He started The American Kantorei, a music ensemble comprised of musicians who can both sing and play instruments, in 1968, and their performances continue today as part of the Bach at the Sem concert series.

From a young age, it was clear that his calling was in music. “It was from my parents at a very early age, three and a half or four years old,” Bergt commented. “I started on a drum set, of all things, but in a serious way. The set included a bass drum with a mallet-pedal so that the strong beats of the measure received the tactus, a snare to keep regular time.”

Bergt also played the piano and the violin. His parents were deeply dedicated to his musical studies, driving long distances on weekends so that he could take lessons from renowned teachers. When he was seven years old, his father told him that he was old enough to take the Greyhound Bus to his lessons in Omaha, Neb. “It was 80 miles one way to Omaha,” Bergt said. “So Saturdays began at 5:00 a.m. in order to arrive 8:00 a.m. I took a violin lesson, two hours long! In the afternoon I went by taxi to Stanley Letovsky’s home-studio for my harmony lessons. After studying two years he had me create original melodies and compose a bass line and then develop the harmonic structures.”

After six years in preparatory school in Fort Wayne, Ind. (then Concordia College), Bergt had a hard choice in front of him — whether to continue studying music or theology. “I dealt with that emotionally already in prep school and during the seminary years, a curriculum which had no music history or music theory,” he said. “I didn’t know if I should go on to become a pastor or a musician.”

Bergt struggled with this throughout his first year at Concordia Seminary, and decided to take a leave of absence his second year in order to attend the St. Louis Institute of Music full time. Two years later, he completed his studies at the Institute and decided to return to the Seminary. “I wouldn’t have had stability in the symphony orchestra life but it wasn’t just that,” Bergt explained. “My father was a pastor and I thought I would love the pastoral ministry. However, I realized that while there was little money [financial security], there was security working with God’s people.”
“I felt compelled to combine music with theology the best I could and to attempt to improve relationships between teacher, organist, church musician, and pastor.”

For the next couple of decades, Bergt did just that — spent his time as a pastor, teacher, and musician in many capacities in the St. Louis area. “In 1960 I became the first violinist of the Ford Foundation St. Louis Young Artist String Quartet,” Bergt said. “We played 100 to 120 schools through the year, four every Monday — two in the morning, two in the afternoon at colleges, high schools and grade schools. That was a great experience. Just imagine: always on Mondays doing this and teaching at Concordia Seminary.”

Bergt and his wife, Joan, were invited through the Educational Department of the Japan Diet (Japan’s legislature) in 1981 to the Musashino Academia Musicae in Tokyo where he first conducted the freshman orchestra on a separate campus 50 kilometers to the west, in Iruma Shi. The orchestra was comprehensive, as the conservatory typically had 4,000 students at a time. “When I was there, we had 2,000 piano students, 1,200 singers who probably doubled in piano or orchestral instruments, and 800 or more voice majors,” Bergt said.

The Bergts returned to Japan for a longer period, this time from summer 1988 to 1995 when Bergt served as conductor of three orchestras and professor of graduate chamber music at Musashino Academia Musicae. At the time, he was the only foreign conductor to have come from America. Bergt calls these years “the height of my musical experience.”

“Joan and I loved life in Japan,” Bergt commented. “The quaint local shops in Nerima-ku to the ‘Radio City’ of the Ginza; their temple worship as Buddhists to Shinto New Year’s Day celebrations; their manner of burial, all were experiences in which we learned to know their culture and spiritual life.

“At St. Paul ILC [International Lutheran Church] Christian visitors, short term and long term, worshiped at the ILC in Chiyoda-ku, which was stimulating,” he continued. “We longed for Sundays to arrive and we could sit together in pews. I assisted Rev. Carl Westby on many Sundays. Often Musashino Academia students were involved in Sunday worship with their stringed and wind instruments. An experience never to be forgotten — not ever!”

Before the Bergts returned from Japan full time, Dr. Bergt began to conduct the Bach at Sem concerts at Concordia Seminary. The concert series began in 1993 and continues today, performing an average of four to six concerts per year on the Seminary campus. Bergt continues to serve as music director and conductor.

Bergt’s illustrious conducting career took him to Japan where he conducted for the Musashino Academia Musicae shown here.

Seminary Chorus toured Texas and Arkansas

The Concordia Seminary Chorus, under the direction of Mr. Greg Gastler, visited Lutheran churches in Texas and Arkansas during its 2011 Spring Tour. The Chorus provided services of word and music in the form of choral Evening Prayer that included prayer, Scripture readings, and congregational singing.

The Chorus kicked off their tour with a preview concert held on the Seminary campus on Feb. 18. Twelve students in the Master of Divinity (M.Div.) program and three students in the deaconess studies program traveled for one week during the Seminary’s winter quarter break. The deaconess students — Sylvia White, Ashley Effken, and Melissa LeFevre — served as guest musicians, playing the violin, trumpet, and flute, respectively.

The Concordia Seminary Chorus, which includes the Spring Tour Group, numbers about 30 seminarians, who commit to balancing full course loads with weekly rehearsals and special tour rehearsals. The Chorus has performed in more than 30 states and provinces in North America during the last 23 years. The seminarians are preparing for full-time service as pastors in The Lutheran Church—Missouri Synod.

A group of 30 Scandinavian (mostly Swedish) Lutheran pastors, with seven wives and two daughters in tow, visited the Seminary campus May 4-7. They toured Swedish and Lutheran sites while in the U.S. for 12 days, including three days in St. Louis. While here, they attended the call service, met with professors about pastoral formation in the U.S., and toured the LCMS International Center.
On the day that the Seminary community looks forward to all year (especially second- and fourth-year students), Concordia Seminary, St. Louis, celebrated 167 calls and vicarage assignments with family and friends filling every pew and chair in the Chapel of St. Timothy and St. Titus. Academic year culminates in 172nd Commencement exercises

Concordia Seminary, St. Louis’ Commencement exercises for the 2011 graduating class took place on Friday, May 20. The day began with a Theological Diploma service at 10:00 a.m and ended with Commencement at 7:00 p.m., both held in the Chapel of St. Timothy and St. Titus on the Seminary campus. Approximately 110 academic degrees were conferred upon the graduates: 86 M.Div.; five M.A.; one M.A. in deaconess studies; three alternate route certificates; three D.Min.; six S.T.M.; and 6 Ph.D. degrees.

During the morning service, all graduates who have been certified by the Concordia Seminary faculty as eligible to receive calls to serve as pastors or deaconesses in The Lutheran Church—Missouri Synod received theological diplomas. In the evening, academic degrees and honors were conferred.

In addition, six honorary degrees and awards were given to esteemed persons chosen by the faculty: John D. Eckrich and Gary W. Thies (Christus Vivit award); Paul M. and Wilbert H. Rosin (Distinguished Alumnus Award); and Carl R. Selle and Hubert H. Temme (honorary Doctor of Divinity degree).

Dr. Timothy Saleska, associate professor of exegetical theology at Concordia Seminary, delivered the sermon for the Theological Diploma service. Dr. John Eckrich, M.D., executive director of Grace Place Lutheran Retreats, delivered the Commencement address.
Rep. Shimkus to present at 2011 LutherHostel

LutherHostel 2011 will be held Oct. 1-4 on the campus of Concordia Seminary. LutherHostel is an event designed to provide growth in biblical knowledge and understanding, fun, and fellowship, and a chance to gain helpful insights for daily living. It is offered for adults age 55 and older.

The theme for the event will be “Public Service and My Lutheran Faith.” The main presenter will be Congressman John M. Shimkus (R, Illinois-19).

Congressman Shimkus is serving his 14th year in Congress and represents the 19th District of Illinois. He serves on the House Energy and Commerce Committee, as well as the Subcommittees on Communications, Technology, and the Internet; Energy and Environment; and Health. He retired from the Army Reserves with the rank of lieutenant colonel as of June 1, 2008, closing out 28 years of military service. In 2007 he was presented the Christus Vivit award by Concordia Seminary, St. Louis. Rep. Shimkus, his wife, Karen, and their three sons maintain their residence in Collinsville, Ill. They are active members of Holy Cross Lutheran Church in Collinsville.

Scheduled activities for LutherHostel 2011 will feature a reception and dinner with President and Mrs. Dale A. Meyer. Other activities include presentations, class visitation, student-led evening devotions, opportunities for informal interaction with faculty, a private demonstration of the organ in the Chapel of St. Timothy and St. Titus, and a tour of selected St. Louis area sites. An optional tour of Lutheran historical sites in Perry County, Mo., also is available on Oct. 5, immediately following LutherHostel.

The LutherHostel fee is $325 per person, which includes all meals and refreshments for the event. Housing is available on campus (on a limited basis for an additional cost) or in nearby hotels. The registration deadline is Sept. 15.

Contemplate…
October 6-8, 2011

Contemplate… is an event for college-age or older potential students. It will provide visitors with an opportunity to learn more about life in the Concordia Seminary community and the preparation that leads to service as a pastor, missionary, chaplain, or deaconess. Campus tours will take place on Thursday afternoon. The “Welcome Reception and Dinner” Thursday evening offers a unique opportunity to meet Seminary faculty in a casual setting. At this time, visitors will also be paired with a student ambassador who can speak with them and answer questions from a student’s perspective. After dinner, there are sessions designed to give an overview of the formation for ministry. On Friday, there will be additional sessions that will focus on the spiritual and personal aspects of the decision-making process, as well as provide visitors with opportunities to choose from presentations on the academic program, resident field education, vicarage or internship year, financial aid, and housing. In the afternoon visitors will have the opportunity to sit in on Seminary classes. Further dialogue with students will take place later that evening during the “Student Panel Discussion.” The structured event will conclude on Saturday morning with presentations on the admissions process, tours of the married and single student housing, and time to schedule individual appointments with admissions counselors and/or the Life Transitions Office. A farewell brunch closes the formal planned activities.

Green and Gold Days
October 14, 2011

Green and Gold Days are for college students thinking about becoming pastors, deaconesses, and church workers in The Lutheran Church—Missouri Synod. Throughout the year, Concordia Seminary will host three of these one-day events that will provide a quick opportunity for college men and women to come and see all the Seminary offers. They will interact with current students, attend classes, worship in chapel, and speak with members of the faculty in a “Table Talk” setting. Visitors will also take a “Loop de Lou” bus tour of St. Louis’ and the Seminary’s main attractions. To end the day, Concordia Seminary will treat participants to a dinner. One unique feature of Green and Gold Days is that pastors and pre-seminary advisors are encouraged to attend the event with their students. By extending this invitation, Concordia Seminary hopes to recognize their role in supporting students interested in pastoral and deaconess studies.

To learn more or to register for these events, please call the admissions office at 1-800-822-9545 or email admissions@csl.edu.

“Unless there is a miracle…”
God’s timing evidenced in AAS gift

“Unless there is a miracle, it will take me an extra year to finish seminary and we will need to borrow more money to finish this academic year.” These were the words of first year seminarian Andrew Bartholomew to his wife, Jennifer. The enormous financial challenge Andrew and Jennifer were facing developed even though both are working jobs to do everything they possibly can to make ends meet. Jennifer is a nanny. Andrew is a student worker in the Seminary’s maintenance department. “Cleaning bathrooms, chipping ice off sidewalks, pulling weeds, whatever it takes. When I get to my first call I’ll be able to do whatever the church calls on me to do, including scrubbing floors,” Bartholomew said.

When it became clear that a student loan would be needed, Andrew completed paperwork at the Seminary’s financial aid office to borrow several thousand dollars in student loans to pay for the next two terms of study.

Just a day later, Andrew’s cell phone rang. Sarah Kassel, from the Seminary’s financial aid office, was calling with most extraordinary news. St. John’s Lutheran Church in Atwater, Minn., had sent a very generous gift to Concordia Seminary’s Adopt-A-Student program.

“I had to ask Ms. Kassel for a moment so I could compose myself,” Bartholomew said. “As it sank in, tears filled my eyes. Soon I was crying and laughing all at the same time. I confess I had some sleepless nights, wrestling with my growing debt. Here, while I was applying for the loans, the Lord’s miraculous hand had already acted on my behalf. The words, ‘Give us this day our daily bread’ came to mind. Like I give my two year old daughter, Madelyn, what she needs at the right time. God was once again doing the same for me. When I called my wife I was still crying. She asked, ‘What’s wrong?’ I told her that not only was there nothing wrong, God had provided a most extraordinary blessing!”

Pastor John Strickland, St. John’s pastor, shared that, as the congregation made their decision to support Concordia Seminary’s Adopt-A-Student program, they did not know Andrew or have any seminary student in mind. The funds had become available after the congregation, due to enrollment declines and other reasons, had closed their two-room school. They had simply hoped that their gift, if possible, might help a student from their LCMS district, Minnesota South.

When Pastor Strickland learned of the timing of the gift and the joy-filled reaction of Andrew and his family, he said, “I am thrilled how this gift has blessed them.”

Andrew’s student loan application? Cancelled!

“When congregations, groups and individuals support Adopt-A-Student they are supporting the person who could be their next pastor,” Bartholomew said. “Their child’s pastor. Their grandchild’s pastor. I hope all Adopt-A-Student sponsors know what a blessing they are.”

Every year generous congregations, groups, schools, and individuals generously support Concordia Seminary’s Adopt-A-Student program. The Seminary’s Financial Aid Office carefully selects students, based on financial need, and awards these Adopt-A-Student gifts accordingly. Every penny of every Adopt-A-Student gift goes directly into the student’s account.

Potential students considering coming to Concordia Seminary to prepare for the Holy Ministry say that affording their seminary preparation is their greatest concern. Adopt-A-Student sponsors are answers to the prayers of these future pastors, missionaries, and deaconesses. Donors love the Adopt-A-Student program because students write their sponsors sharing joys, challenges, and progress. Sponsors and students stand together in prayer. Some stay in touch long after seminary graduation.

To become an Adopt-A-Student sponsor or learn more about this opportunity to personally correspond with a future pastor or deaconess including some of the international students on pages 5-7, please call Seminary Advancement at 1-800-822-5287 or use the envelope inserted in this and every issue of the Concordia Seminary magazine.

Jennifer, Asa, Madelyn, and Andrew Bartholomew
March 18 was an exciting day at Concordia Seminary. That is when the Phase One renovation project officially kicked-off. It began with a stand-off between a Seminary President behind the controls of some heavy machinery and a brick wall.

The chapel service on March 18 included a procession from the Chapel of St. Timothy and St. Titus to the front steps of Koburg Hall. Dr. Kent Burresson, dean of the chapel, led those gathered in a brief liturgical continuation of the chapel service. Dr. Dale A. Meyer, president, climbed into a track hoe and pulled down a portion of the wall enclosing the Service Drive, just outside the cafeteria complex.

The Phase One project is a major renovation of the cafeteria complex, Stoeckhardt Hall, and the first floor of Guenther Hall. It also includes the creation of an East Courtyard between the cafeteria complex and Founders Hall (a.k.a. “Isolation” dorm), as well as various office moves. The main goal of the project is to update and create a student-centered space within the adjoined Koburg, Wartburg, and Stoeckhardt Halls. Currently, many of the offices which are central to facilitating student life are spread throughout various buildings on campus. With the renovation of the kitchen, Koburg Dining Hall, and Stoeckhardt Hall (in addition to the already renovated Wartburg Dining Hall, a.k.a. Wartburg Commons), these offices will be brought together into a single complex, each within brief walking distance from the other, all located together in the center of campus.

The cafeteria complex, which includes the two dining halls, will be named The Johann Hinrich Benidt Seminary Center in honor of the Benidt family, who contributed significant funds to the “Place” component of the How Will They Hear? Campaign.

In the Spring 2011 issue of Concordia Journal, Dr. Dale A. Meyer officially announced the new name of the Koburg/Wartburg kitchen and dining complex – The Johann Hinrich Benidt Seminary Center. The Benidt Seminary Center will be named after the grandfather of Charles Benidt, well known for the foundation which bears his name and has been so supportive of Concordia Seminary and the Phase One Renovation. Dr. Meyer noted that, for only the second time, one of the buildings on campus will be named after a layman. “And he’s also from the 20th Century,” Meyer said, “while all the other named buildings are in memory of Lutheran leaders from the 19th Century.”

Dr. Meyer went on to say, “To name a building after a layman from the 20th Century is certainly to highlight the fact that the church and its future does not only rest on the shoulders of pastors, but on every member of the church. And God uses every one of them. Johann Hinrich Benidt’s impact is most clearly seen in the life that he inspired his grandson Charles to lead. Johann’s influence has spread beyond his wildest imaginings, and it will continue to leave its mark on the future of Concordia Seminary, and through its students, upon the church at large. We’re proud to name our new world class kitchen and dining complex in honor of Johann Hinrich Benidt.”

The Phase One renovation project is a sign of the vitality of Concordia Seminary. The campus is alive and flourishing. The Phase One renovations come 85 years after the first dedication of this campus. Today, by God’s grace Concordia Seminary is moving confidently into the next 85 years and beyond.
For the second year in a row, the Seminary Guild has decided to include support for the Ethnic Immigrant Institute of Theology (EIIT) in their 2011-2012 project list. The amount of $1,000 if funded, will help in deflected travel costs for EIIT students when they come to campus for week-long intensives.

The Ethnic Immigrant Institute of Theology is a specialized program of theological education and formation for effective pastoral and deaconess leadership within immigrant-based churches. Concordia Seminary accomplishes this by offering a distance theological education program that leads to certification for ordination in the LCMS. The program provides pastoral leadership from within an ethnic immigrant community that is associated with the LCMS. Participants have the approval and support of their home church and the LCMS district within which they are carrying out their missionary work, not only in this country but also in their home countries like Sudan and the Congo.

A different kind of ministry

Lutheran pastors and deaconesses involved in specialized settings of counseling and institutional chaplaincy gathered in Atlanta, Ga., last Oct. Four members of the Concordia Seminary Class of 1967 were present: Bruce Hartung, Leroy Joesten, Charles Pieplow, and Charles Weinrich. Hartung and Joesten were honored with the Christus in Mundo award, which is the highest award for distinctive service for ministries in chaplaincy, pastoral counseling, and clinical education.

Rev. Pieplow’s first call was to a small congregation in Tuscaloosa, Ala., where he served until 1974 when he entered a clinical pastoral education residency at Montclair Medical Center in Birmingham, Ala. After his residency he returned to the parish for three and one half years until hospital chaplaincy again beckoned. From 1982-2006, Pieplow served several hospitals in Alabama as a chaplain and CPE supervisor.

Washington, Ill., was the site of Rev. Weinrich’s first call where he served for four years. Later, he completed a residency at St. Luke’s Hospital in Milwaukee, Wis., and a CPE Supervisor-in-Training residency at St. Luke’s Medical Center in Chicago, Ill. From 1974-1991 Weinrich was head of the department of pastoral care at Overlook Hospital, Summit, N.J.; from 1991-1996 he was a CPE supervisor at Children’s Hospital in Milwaukee and from 1996-2005 filled a similar position at The Village at Manor Park in Milwaukee.

Joesten’s first call was to a parish in Fairbank, Iowa where he served for three years and did his first half unit of CPE. He entered a year CPE residency at St. Luke’s Medical Center in 1970 and a second year supervisory residency in 1971. By 1972 Joesten was called to Lutheran General Hospital in Park Ridge, Ill., where he was asked to develop a ministry to the terminally-ill and bereaved. He remained until his retirement from full-time chaplaincy in 2009.

Hartung’s first call was as a part-time assistant pastor in Waukegan, Ill., as he also began his Ph.D. program at Northwestern University/Garrett-Evangelical Theological Seminary in Evanston, Ill. Completing his Ph.D. degree in pastoral psychology and counseling, he stayed until 1983 at Lutheran General where he was the director of the Pastoral Counseling Center. In 1983 he accepted a position as the executive director of the Onondaga Pastoral Counseling Center in Syracuse, N.Y.; in 1991 he was called as the first director of Ministerial Health/Health and Healing Ministries of the LCMS. In 2003 he was called to Concordia Seminary where he still serves.
